February 1, 2007

Dear United States Attorney:

Women in Federal Law Enforcement (WIFLE), an organization working to promote the value that women bring to law enforcement, will hold its eighth annual leadership training conference June 26, 27 and 28, 2007, at the Westin Hotel and Conference Center, Rancho Mirage, California. This year's program will focus on leadership skills necessary for advancement in the ranks of government as well as an examination of key enforcement issues, and the challenges women face in a federal law enforcement agency. Registration is $475.00 before April 30, 2007, and $525.00 after that date. Please visit our web site at www.WIFLE.org for all details. I have enclosed a registration form that can be duplicated as needed.

WIFLE is actively seeking the support of federal prosecutors in an effort to enhance our learning and networking experiences at the conference. Again, this year WIFLE will recognize "Top Prosecutors" during our Awards Banquet on June 27, at 7:00 p.m. This is the third year WIFLE is presenting this award and individuals or "teams" of prosecutors may be nominated who have had successful prosecutions in calendar year 2006. The "Top Prosecutor" award is incorporated permanently into our awards program. Other awards presented that evening are the Julie Y. Cross Award for heroism and exceptional courage, Outstanding Federal Law Enforcement Employee, and Outstanding Advocate for Women in Federal Law Enforcement. Enclosed is an awards package containing a nomination form and criteria for your use.

On opening day, invited welcoming keynote speaker Deborah Spero, Deputy Commissioner of U.S. Customs and Border Protection will kick off this exciting conference. Following the opening, we have a director from the Franklin Covey Institute discussing leadership and trust and then a dynamic presentation by the International Association of Chiefs of Police on leadership and collaboration. This new leadership-training program was developed in conjunction with the West Point Military Academy. Both leadership general assemblies should be invigorating for all of our attendees. Not to be missed is our "power panel" of outstanding leaders in our federal law enforcement community. Join us for our keynote panel on June 27 featuring invited speakers Karen Tandy, Administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration, John Clark, Director of the United States Marshals Service, and Mark Sullivan, Director of the United States Secret Service. This two-hour panel will shed insights and strategies for success in personal careers and for the agencies they lead. Visit our web site for all workshop information and other topics presented during this training.

We are soliciting workshop proposals for model examples on successful case prosecutions involving dynamic collaborations and/or the challenges and the resolutions to a successful prosecution. Please send proposals to wifle@comcast.net.

Time & Convenience is the official conference planner handling all matters for WIFLE concerning this conference. All registration should be accomplished online. Provisions have been made to accept mail-in and phone registrations on a limited basis. Any questions, please contact Ms. Carolyn Heafner of Time & Convenience at 1-866-39WIFLE or 1-410-451-0002, extension 202, facsimile 1-410-451-7373, or email: cheafner@timeandconvenience.com.

I would like to personally invite you to our opening ceremony on June 26 if your travel schedule permits. We look forward to meeting you and members of your Judicial District at our conference.

Sincerely,

Margaret M. Moore
Executive Director
